THE TEXT

- Mary Kom, a sportswoman who has made India proud with her glorious achievements, is a boxer—the only Indian woman boxer who managed to qualify for the 2012 Summer Olympics where she also won a Bronze Medal. A five-time world amateur boxing champion, she is surprisingly serene and philosophical about all her achievements.
- 2. She was born in Kangathei, Manipur, India. She was named Mangte Chungneijang at birth which means "prosperous" in her local dialect. However, she chose the name "Mary" as she entered the world of professional sports for ease of pronunciation.
- 3. Her parents were poor farm laborers. She was the eldest of four siblings and had to work hard from a young age to fend for her family. She not only went to school to study, but also took care of her younger siblings and worked in the fields with her parents to help them.
- 4. As a school girl, she used to play a variety of sports—hockey, football, and athletics—but surprisingly not boxing! Few years later, when the Manipuri boxer, Dingko Singh, won a gold medal at the Asian Games in 1998, the girl was inspired to take up boxing.
- 5. Taking up a sport, still considered "masculine" by social standards, was no easy task for the young tribal girl. But Mary was not someone to be discouraged, and traveled to Imphal to train in athletics. Today her success is for all to see! Of course, there is more to Mary Kom than just professional success; she also teaches boxing to underprivileged youngsters for free.

Narcissistic personalities can only see things one way - their way. In fact, they are very good (at/about/for) finding extremely convincing reasons for their way; you are (both/either/neither) with them or against them. If you are with them, you can (share/divide/cut) their glory, if you are against them and tell them what they do not want to hear, you (would/would have/will) get their anger. The queen in the children's story, "Snow White", is an example of a narcissistic personality. The mirror had to tell her she (is/were/was) the fairest in the kingdom, but when it told her that Snow White was the fairest, she punished Snow White by having her (take/took/taken) to the forest to die.

sound/healthy body without a sound mind is not enough to succeed in a sports career.
